

This comment is regarding the portability of cell phones issues.

I want to make one thing clear. As a consumer I WANT to have the choice to keep my cell phone number even if I change the plans from one company to another company.

This right is the same as the:

- right of choosing the long distance carrier
- or right of internet domains.

The long distance example is pretty selfexplanatory, but the second one may not be. So, here it is, If I choose to move my servers from one hosting company to the next my internet address would still stay the same ie my consumers or friends could still access my webpage irrespective of the location or company that I choose to the hosting with.

It is ridiculous to think that the consumer would not want to have a choice in whether he/she would want to keep the number.

Thanks.
